Not too bad, just spent the morning trying to figure out what to do. I think we have a good plan, didn't take much convincing of anyone and I just went out the procedure to the rig so hopefully we can start working on getting it done and getting this well over with. People are happy about the sands we seen so far. But that is on the down low.

Yah really busy, got the long string to design, so we will be running that but still have to work the liner for a contingency. I have to go offshore, our normal WSL is heading in and the new guy is good, but not in tune with the well so I need to go out and make sure they follow every step as any deviations could lead to us not getting a good cement job and having to do a lot of remedial operations. I'm alright going, don't plan to stay long. Run casing then head home. [REDACTED]
